From the tractor

Commissioner

I'm afraid it is going to be some time before water issues cease to be a critical concern facing the state. While we have seen some precipitation since the beginning of the year, it is going to take time and a substantial amount of rainfall to bring water levels back to normal.

Even if we see enough rain to get out of a drought, many communities are now focused on long-term plans for water usage and conservation. This long-term vision makes good sense, particularly in light of the state's anticipated population growth in the next 20 years.

Water policies and restrictions affect all of us, and the agricultural community is seeing that in particular this year.

Increased municipal water restrictions have had a significant impact on segments of N.C. agriculture, particularly the nursery and landscaping industries. Many companies have been forced to lay off workers as sales of plants, trees and nursery products have dropped.

The trickle-down effects likely will be felt in many other businesses as well because these businesses purchase fertilizer, equipment and other goods as part of their operations.

Water-use policies don't just affect nurseries and landscaping, but can also impact a variety of agricultural processing plants, too. Many people rely on these facilities for their livelihood.

I recently held a roundtable discussion about

Global bio-energy demand will prop up commodity prices, USDA economist says

The global demand for bio-energy will continue to have a significant impact on commodity prices, a U.S. Department of Agriculture economist said at the third annual Agricultural Development Forum.

Over the next 10 to 15 years, demand for ethanol and biodiesel will prop up commodity prices, especially for corn and soybeans, said Dr. Gerald Bange, head of USDA's World Agricultural Outlook Board. These crops will compete for acres with each other and with other crops such as small grains and cotton, he said.

Bange spoke to about 200 farmers, agricultural leaders and agribusiness professionals at the forum, hosted by Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler Jan. 31 at the State Fairgrounds.

The 2007 Energy Act says U.S. gasoline consumption must include 9 billion gallons of renewable fuel this year and 15 billion gallons by 2015. "That 15 billion gallons will account for about 10 percent of gasoline used in the U.S.," Bange said.

The amount of U.S. corn used for ethanol is projected to increase 1.1 billion bushels, or 51 percent, in 2007-2008. Other uses of corn have remained stable, but "there certainly is the possibility of using a bigger share of the corn crop as ethanol production approaches 15 billion gallons," the economist said.

Increased production of biofuels – particularly in Europe and the United States – is dramatically affecting global vegetable oil markets, pushing soybean cash prices as high as $12.50 in early 2008, Bange said. China's demand for soybeans also is helping prices. The Asian country is expected to import a record 34 million tons this year.

Because competition from corn will limit U.S. soybean acreage, South American countries such as Brazil and Argentina are likely to help meet Chi-drought and water issues with leaders from various sectors of North Carolina’s agriculture community. There is great concern about more restrictions and the impact they may have on producing food stocks.

I am not sure everyone understands just how serious this water crisis is. I think part of that is because water still flows freely from our faucets. I know in Raleigh usage is not down that much despite restrictions and calls for conservation. It is hard to envision not having any water, when you can turn on a faucet anytime and water flows.

Many people who rely on wells for water understand clearly the need to conserve. Most know what it is like to reach the bottom of the barrel so to speak.

It is abundantly clear that agricultural use needs to be considered as part of overall conservation goals and plans. My department remains actively involved in drought discussions on a state level and will continue to weigh in on agricultural needs.

In the short-term, I am asking the General Assembly for some funds to try to help the green industry through promotion and educational outreach efforts. The green industry is not the biggest water user in the state. However, because many homeowners are not familiar with conservation planting and watering, they do nothing.

People who want to beautify their yards do have options.

Xeriscaping, or using drought tolerant plants as landscape features, is a viable alternative. There are many drought tolerant plant choices that people can choose, but helping people understand conservation planting and watering is important to helping this industry weather the drought.

We will continue to work on these issues and also represent agriculture’s interests in drought discussions. And I’ll still continue to pray for rain to bring us some relief.

NCDA&CS offers cost-share assistance to farmers for food safety audits

Fruit and vegetable growers who choose to have their food safety practices verified as part of industry standards known as Good Agricultural Practices and Good Handling Practices can receive up to $400 in cost-share help from the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services.

The cost-share program will help farmers pay for third-party audits to see if their food safety practices meet federal guidelines that are important in marketing produce, Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said in announcing the program.

This is the second year NCDA&CS has offered the program, which is funded by a grant from the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

“Food safety is a top priority for anyone producing food crops,” Troxler said. “Buyers are demanding assurances from growers that their produce is safe. It’s going to become more difficult for farmers to market their fruits and vegetables if they don’t have a program in place to ensure their produce is free of contamination. A third-party audit can verify an operation’s food safety program and can provide recommendations for meeting industry guidelines.”

Food recalls continue to make national headlines, underscoring the importance of food safety measures throughout the food chain.

Under the program, NCDA&CS will pay up to $400 of a grower’s cost for an audit of the farm’s food safety program. Audits can be for farm review, field harvest and field packing activities, packing house facility, storage and transportation and traceback. Payments will be made to the third-party auditor, with growers responsible for any remaining balance.

Farmers interested in the cost-share program must submit an application form for approval prior to receiving the GAP/GHP audit.

Assistance is limited to growers who undergo a GAP/GHP audit in 2008. Funding is available on a first-come, first-served basis while it lasts. Growers should submit an application form for the cost-share program to the NCDA&CS prior to receiving the audit. For additional information or to request an application, contact Ross Williams in the NCDCA&S Marketing Division at (919) 733-7887, ext. 237, or by e-mail at ross.williams@ncmail.net.

Bucolic Briefs

A series of free risk management workshops, titled “Managing Price Volatility By Using Futures and Options,” will be held across the state. Topics to be covered include: Introduction to Grain Hedging, Basis Trading, Cost of Carry, Cotton Futures and Options Trading on Futures, Equities and Indices. All workshops are scheduled from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. with an “on your own” lunch break. Following are dates and locations: March 5 at Stanly Community College, Crutchfield Campus, Locust, (704) 888-8848; and March 7 at Mitchell Community College, Statesville, (704) 878-3200.

Educational horse classes will be held March 6 and 13 beginning at 6 p.m. with dinner followed by program. Topics include saddle fitting, pasture management, hay information and more. Cost is $6 per person. Contact Martha Mobley at (919) 496-3344 or at martha_mobley@ncsu.edu for more.

The N.C. Beekeepers Association will hold its Spring Conference March 7 & 8 at the Ramada Inn Convention Center in Burlington. Planned workshops will focus on watering your bees, preparing honey for sale, small hive beetle research and non-honey bee stinging insects. Vendors will also be present with a variety of beekeeping equipment and books. For more, contact Charles Heatherly at (919) 859-6995 or e-mail at heath7@bellsouth.net or go to www.ncbeekeepers.org/meetings.

The Johnston County Horse Show Series features monthly horse shows starting at 8:30 a.m. at the Johnston County Livestock Arena in Smithfield. A negative Coggins test is required for all horses. Cost is $7.50 per class. Following are upcoming show dates: March 15, April 12 and May 17. Raindates for all shows are the following day. For more, contact Michele McLaughlin, (919) 934-1344 or e-mail sileeno@ipass.net.

The Wake County Beekeepers Association will sponsor a Beginner Beekeeping Workshop March 15 from 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. at the Raleigh Police Club, 3500 Leonard Road, Knightdale. Cost is $25 and includes book handouts and dinner. For more, contact Vivian Joyner at (919) 387-0164 or Danny Jaynes, (919) 567-9568.

The Biofuels Center of North Carolina is offering loans and grants to develop a sustainable biofuels industry in North Carolina. Proposals are sought in the following broad areas: Industrial Production: New Opportunities - both technologies and installations; Agriculture: renewable crops or feedstocks; Innovation/Research; Workforce Development.

The application deadline is March 17. Guidelines and forms can be downloaded from the Biofuels Center’s Web site at www.biofuels.org. Click on Capacity Building Program.

For this cycle, grants will not exceed $200,000 and loans $250,000. For more, call (919) 693-3000 or e-mail grants@biofuelscenter.org.

Montgomery Community College in Troy will offer a beekeeping class through March 17 from 7-9 p.m. The course is designed for the beginner to experienced beekeeper and will cover the equipment needed for beekeeping, disease treatments, pesticide regulations and more. Cost is $25. Contact Gary Saunders, (910) 576-6222, for more.

Blue Q Ranch will hold a private treaty Registered Angus Bull Sale March 29 from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. in Troy. For more, contact Michael Montoya at (910) 220-5815.

The Sedgefield Hunt, based out of Greensboro, is putting on an AERC-sanctioned endurance ride April 12 at the J. Robert Gordon Field Trial Grounds in Hoffman. There will be 30-mile and 55-mile races, plus a 15-mile ride. For more, call Sue Showfety at (336) 622-3236 or go to www.Sedgefieldhunt.com.

The Davidson County Horsemen’s Association annual Open Horse Show will be held April 26 at the Thoroughbred Training Center in Davie County. The show will benefit four Davidson County charities. A negative Coggins test is required for all horses. Gates open at 8 a.m. High Point award given under DCHA rules, youth sportsmanship award given (18 & under). Free for spectators. For more, contact James or Karen Jones, (336) 731-2051 or 242-3996 or e-mail at jmjones54@triad.rr.com.

The 7th Annual Rusty Pistons Antique Tractor Show & Festival will be held April 25-27 in Monroe. The event features hundreds of antique tractors, new tractor and lawn mower dealers, hit-and-miss engines, crafts, kiddie tractor pull, pony rides, hay wagon rides, kiddie train rides, gospel and bluegrass music, food, old farm equipment, an auction benefitting Hospice and more. Miss North Carolina 2008 Jessica Jacobs will also appear. For more, call Reid Helms at (704) 624-6105 or go to www.rustypistontractorshow.com.

The Mid-Atlantic Texas Longhorn Breeders Association will host its annual Fun Day May 10 at 8 a.m. in Reidsville at the Upper Piedmont Research Station. Bulls, cows, steers and calves will be for sale, showcasing breeding programs. Speakers will focus on other longhorn-related topics. # Emergency Hay Program to begin winding down

■ Sales at distribution sites will scale back to two days a week on March 3

The state’s Emergency Hay Program, which has been helping livestock owners meet their animals’ winter feeding needs, will begin to wind down in March.

Beginning Monday, March 3, the state’s six hay distribution sites will scale back sales to two days a week – Tuesdays and Thursdays – from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Starting March 17, the sites will sell hay on Tuesdays only. Hours will remain the same.

All sites will stop selling hay on April 1, but they will maintain a small inventory of large and small bales that can be used in an emergency.

“Our goal has been to help livestock owners make it through the winter, and we have been able to meet their needs,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. “By extending sales until April 1, we are confident that they will not be left without a safety net.”

In December, the Council of State unanimously authorized the N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services to use up to $3.5 million to purchase and transport hay to North Carolina, where it could be resold to farmers for the cost of the hay and transportation.

As of mid-February, the program had spent about $345,000 and brought more than 1,750 tons of hay into North Carolina from several states and Canada.

Hay is being sold at the following NCDA&CS locations: Mountain Research Station, Waynesville, (828) 456-3943; Upper Mountain Research Station, Laurel Springs, (336) 982-2501; Piedmont Research Station, Salisbury, (704) 278-2624; Piedmont Triad Farmers Market, Colfax, (336) 605-9157; Caswell Research Farm, Kinston, (252) 208-3361; and Oxford Tobacco Research Station, Oxford, (919) 693-2483.

Livestock owners may purchase up to eight large bales and 60 small bales per day. Limits are subject to change depending on supply and demand.

Livestock owners interested in purchasing full loads of hay can use the NCDA&CS Hay Alert Web site and hotline. The department’s Ag and Equine Partners programs provide transportation cost-share assistance to livestock owners who source loads of hay themselves.

For information about NCDA&CS hay relief programs, go to www.ncagr.com/hayalert or call 1-866-506-6222 weekdays.

NCDA&CS encourages groups to organize hay loads

In communities across the state, civic groups, cattle and horse clubs, churches, Cooperative Extension offices and other groups have expressed an interest in organizing shipments of hay for livestock owners who may not need a full load.

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services encourages this cooperation to help meet the needs of farmers and ranchers.

Groups who organize loads of hay as Community Partners will be able to apply for Ag/Equine Partners transportation cost-share reimbursements for the livestock owners who purchase hay through their efforts.

Groups interested in becoming a Community Partner can learn more by calling the Hay Alert hotline at 1-866-506-6222 weekdays or logging on to www.ncagr.com/HayAlert/CommunityPartners.htm.

na’s needs. “Brazil has a lot of land down there,” Bange said. “They do have the capacity if prices are satisfactory.”

Bange also said that global demand for wheat, coupled with a tight supply, has led to near-record prices for the crop. The average market price is forecast at $6.45 to $6.85 per bushel. Some areas of the country are seeing cash prices of $10 to $13 per bushel.

Analysts expect further decreases in cotton plantings this year, as rising prices for soybean and wheat entice farmers to plant them instead, Bange said.

The USDA spring plantings report will be released March 31.

Bange’s presentation, titled “Situation and Outlook for Agricultural Commodities,” is available online at www.usda.gov/oce/speeches/index.htm.

Farmstead dairy producers sought for pasteurizer loan program

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services’ Agribusiness Development Section is looking for small dairies in North Carolina interested in starting or expanding their farmstead operation.

Farmstead dairies process milk produced on their farm into value-added products such as cheese. The milk may come from goats or cattle. NCDA&CS received grant money from the N.C. Agricultural Advancement Consortium and U.S. Department of Agriculture to purchase two small-batch pasteurizers that will be available to the most qualified applicants for one year at no charge.

“Value-added opportunities can improve a farm’s bottom line, and this program helps farmers with a good business plan get started without having to make that initial investment in a pasteurizer,” said Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler. The department estimates there currently are 18 to 20 farmstead dairy operations in the state.

Applications to participate in the project are due by Feb. 29, and project administrators hope to identify participants by March 15. The dairies will be selected on a competitive basis using the following criteria:

- Business readiness of

- the applicant;
  - Experience in the dairy industry;
  - Viability of the business plan;
  - Knowledge of value-added dairy production;
  - Suitability of available pasteurizer to the planned production;
  - Personal investment of time and money in the value-added venture.
- The selected recipients must agree to allow officials from the NCDA&CS to review the businesses’ books to track the profitability of the operations using the supplied equipment. The farmsteads receiving the equipment must also post a $1,500 refundable deposit against the value of the pasteurizer, and must agree to abide by all laws and regulations pertaining to production and marketing of the value-added dairy products.
- The NCDA&CS Food and Drug Protection Division will help monitor the program and work with the recipients to help them through the process, Troxler said.
- Complete rules and information are available from Ron Fish, assistant director of marketing, NCDA&CS, 1020 Mail Service Center, Raleigh, NC 27699. He may also be reached at (919) 733-7887, ext. 219, or ron.fish@ncmail.net.

North Carolina’s latest agricultural numbers

N.C. farm numbers, acreage hold steady

The number of farms in North Carolina held steady at 48,000 during 2006, according to a recent report from the U.S. Department of Agriculture. The state’s farm acreage also remained the same at 8.8 million.

North Carolina led the nation in farm loss in 2004 and 2005, losing a combined 4,000 farms. But the state has yielded the not-so-coveted top spot to Tennessee, which lost 2,000 farms in 2006. North Carolina was one of 16 states whose farm numbers did not change.

“I want to commend the county governments and non-profit groups that are working so hard to preserve working farms across the state,” Agriculture Commissioner Steve Troxler said. “Cooperation is the key to slowing the trend of farm loss.”

The N.C. Department of Agriculture and Consumer Services is reviewing more than 90 applications for grants through the Agricultural Development and Farmland Preservation Trust Fund. The fund received an $8 million appropriation from the General Assembly to assist communities with conserving working farms. The department will award grants later this year.

The United States lost 13,280 farms in 2006, the USDA report said. The report, titled “Farm Numbers and Livestock Operations,” is available online at <http://usda.mannlib.cornell.edu/MannUsda/viewDocumentInfo.do?documentID=1259>.

N.C. wheat acreage up sharply

The prospect of strong prices prompted North Carolina farmers to plant 800,000 acres of winter wheat last fall, tying a record set in 1985.

Wheat acreage in the state is 27 percent higher than in 2006, when farmers put in 630,000 acres. Nationwide, wheat acreage is up 4 percent from 2006, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s winter wheat report in January.

The U.S. wheat supply is extremely tight because of bad weather and the world’s continued strong appetite for wheat, said Dr. Gerald Bange, a USDA economist who chairs the World Agricultural Outlook Board.

“Strong domestic milling demand, particularly for high-quality wheat, and prospects for the highest exports since 1995-96 are expected to leave ending stocks (of wheat) at their lowest level in 60 years,” Bange said. “Production shortfalls in other major exporting countries have left exportable supplies of wheat very tight, with the United States the only available source of wheat for many importing countries.”

U.S. yields have fallen below trend for two years straight, mainly because of bad weather, Bange said. An early April frost across the Central Plains and South damaged last year’s crop. Production also was affected by too much rain at harvest in the Central and Southern Plains and extreme heat and dryness in the Northern Plains and Pacific Northwest, he said.

Because of the tight supply and high demand, cash prices are at near-record levels for all classes of wheat. Nationally, the average market price is forecast at $6.45 to $6.85 per bushel. At press time, cash prices for soft red winter wheat in North Carolina ranged from more than $9 per bushel at the elevators to more than $10 per bushel at a Statesville flour mill. New-crop prices at the elevators ranged from $5.99 to $8.19.
